FRAMECAD has developed some innovative new technology in the last year that will potentially change the way you plan, design and build in the future. We'll be showcasing this new technology at design and build seminars in Sydney and Brisbane, along with important new research about the safety and sustainability of cold formed steel frame construction.

- A new compact fabrication machine that can produce framing at rates up to 700 metres per hour, and achieve capital payback in three months based on making framing for just one 180-200sqm house per day.
- Compelling new evidence from CSIRO that confirms the superior performance of light gauge steel frame construction in bush fire zones.
- Australian case studies that prove FRAMECAD technology can reduce build time by as much as 30%, reduce costs and improve profitability.
- A new fully self-contained mobile factory for quick-start on site production of steel framing virtually anywhere, even in the outback.

- See a home design that can be built in just 22 hours.
- Discover why light gauge steel frame construction is the ideal building solution in cyclone, termite and earthquake prone areas.
